Senate OKs $16 billion social spending cuts Measure outlasts stalling Democrats

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate unanimously approved a $16 billion package of cuts in social programs Wednesday, giving the chamber's Republicans a first victory in their nearly year-long drive to whittle federal spending.

On a 99-0 roll call, senators passed the measure that Democrats had been stalling since Tuesday. The vote came after a compromise was reached among Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and the Clinton administration.

The vote allowed the Senate to pass its first major bill since its Easter recess, joining the House in Congress' first long break from the grueling legislative year that began in January.

The measure also permitted leaders of both parties to declare that they had agreed on their priorities: deficit reduction for Republicans, and protection of some social programs for Democrats.

The package was called "an important down payment on deficit reduction." He knew the measure was but a tiny fraction of the record $1.2 trillion in savings Republicans will need to deliver their promise of a balanced budget in seven years.

Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., was the only senator who did not vote on final passage.

Under the deal, $835 million would be restored to programs for children, housing and jobs that Republicans wanted to cut. In addition, more than $1.6 billion would be trimmed from airport improvements, rental assistance, federal administrative and travel costs and other programs. Overall, the changes boost the measure's deficit reduction by $812 million to about $16 billion.

In addition, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., agreed to drop an amendment he had offered that would have halted the administration's $20 billion rescue of the faltering Mexican peso.

The White House and Democrats vehemently opposed the amendment, which they said would have imperiled the Mexican economy and markets the world over. D'Amato had said the bailout was wasting taxpayers' money, but he dropped the his effort in order to let the spending-cuts package go through.

"It's an agreement we all can support," Daschle said.

The measure, which the Senate began debating March 29, is a top priority for Dole and other GOP senators eager to prove they are as zealous about deficit reduction as their faster-moving House brethren. The House already has approved a bill slashing $17 billion from home-heating aid, education, public broadcasting and other programs.

U.S. ambassador confirms ethnic killings in Burundi

Associated Press

KIGALI, Burundi — Deep in a banana grove, an abandoned mud and straw hut, a man the American ambassador to two fresh graves told him about nights of terror, gunshots, and a child killed by bayonets.

After the village, the story is the same. Hutus in ragged clothes emerge from the hut to tell foreigners how the Tutsi-dominated Hutus killed those too slow to get away.

"It's a story that happens every day. It is tragic," U.S. Ambassador Robert Krueger, who with two Burundian members of parliament toured northern Kanyanza province to investigate reports of ethnic killings.

"In the night, forces come and shoot in the air. As the people flee, they are attacked with machetes," Krueger said.

Krueger's charge earlier in the week that up to 100 people had been massacred in northeastern Kanyanza province, near the Tanzania border, urged the government to investigate.

Krueger hopes to draw international attention to the escalating violence in an effort to pressure the Burundian government to investigate the murders and international observers to get involved.

Burundi is not expected to suffer a genocide on the scale of neighboring Rwanda, where last year Hutu extremists slaughtered at least 500,000 people, mostly Tutsis. But more than 100,000 people have died in a low-level civil war since Tutsi soldiers assassinated Burundi's first elected Hutu president in an October 1993 coup attempt.

Krueger's unannounced visit to Kanyanza province angered the provincial governor, a Tutsi who refused to stop following Krueger and his escort of armed Tutsi soldiers. But even their chilling presence did not prevent villagers from telling their stories.

With the soldiers following, a man in the village of Ngoma led the ambassador to the graves of a woman and her 12-year-old daughter. He said they were killed with bayonets Monday night.

Soldiers and displaced Tutsis came in the night, killing 11 people, the villagers said.

A few miles away, in a town called Maramuya, villagers said Tutsis and soldiers killed three people a week ago, including a woman and her baby girl.

The woman carried the baby on her back as she tried to run, they said, and the soldiers drove a bayonet through the child's back and into the woman.

Venant Barazingiza, the provincial Tutsi governor, said it was unfair to place all the blame on Tutsis.

"To say this violence was done by the military and the (Tutsi) displaced is not true," said Barazingiza.

"In this province, we know there are armed bands," he added, using the government term for extremist Hutu militias.

He did not explain why he thought Hutu militias would attack Hutu villages.

"We all know who does it," said Krueger. "We try to be diplomatic, but we know."

In Kanyanza province — which borders Rwanda and is about 670 miles east of the capital Bujumbura — the Hutu villages appear deserted at first.

Utah's anti-smoking laws some of strictest in nation

Editor's Note: This is the last in a three-part series on smoking, its health effects and the influences community and religion have on people who smoke.

Utah has one of the lowest smoking populations in the nation. Only 14 percent of Utahns smoke, compared to 25 percent of people who smoke nationwide, say representatives from the Utah State Department of Health.

Utah's low percentage of smokers is often attributed to its high population of members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Utah also has some of the strictest anti-smoking laws in the nation.

The LDS culture significantly influences Utah laws and smoking habits, said Steven Hadden, a community health specialist with the Utah State Department of Health.

"There's no question that the LDS cultural group, with the Word of Wisdom restricting smoking and prohibiting the use of other harmful substances, is going to have an influence," Hadden said.

A BYU student and former smoker, who did not wish to be identified "because of the stigma attached to smoking at BYU," said there is definitely a cultural pressure not to smoke.

The student, who is not a member of the LDS Church, quit for health reasons.

The student said he knows a number of people at BYU who smoke but they don't smoke in public because someone might see them.

Although the Church has not issued any official statements concerning smoking laws, its stance on smoking does influence them, said Don LeFevre, LDS Church spokesman.

"The citizens of the state and the state legislators let their views be known and many of them are LDS," LeFevre said.

The state, however, does not see smoking as a moral issue but rather a health issue, Hadden said.

Recent research by the EPA and others provide statistics, based on health issues, which justify strict smoking laws, Hadden said.

"Direct smoking is the No. 1 preventable cause of death in the nation," he said. "Environmental tobacco smoke (ETS) is No. 3."

EPA studies show that ETS kills an estimated 53,000 Americans each year.

According to a study by Action on Smoking and Health, ETS presents greater dangers to children than to adults. The study reported that ETS is responsible for 7,500 to 15,000 infant hospitalizations each year.

These and other similar studies prompted the passing of the Utah Indoor Clean Air Act in 1994, Hadden said.

The law went into effect Jan. 1, 1995 and prohibits smoking "in all enclosed indoor places of public access and publicly owned buildings and offices."

Secondhand Smoke

Environmental tobacco smoke is a "Group A Carcinogen," in the same category as asbestos and benzene. It is one of a few substances known to cause cancer in humans. According to one study, each year it kills:

- an estimated 53,000 Americans
- more people than all the victims of automobile accidents, including those caused by drunk drivers
- more than twice as many people as all homicides, including those involving firearms
- more than twice as many people as AIDS
- more than ten times as many people as all the illicit drugs targeted in the "war on drugs"

BYU charges former worker with theft

APRIL K. SAUNDERS

A former BYU employee will go to court next month accused of embezzling $20,000.

On Tuesday, BYU filed charges against Peter L. Woodman, 28, of Woodman was charged with a sin- gle count of theft by deception, a second-degree felony.

Woodman was a former business manager of BYU's Museum of Art," Brent Harker, of BYU Public Relations.

University Police detective Jeff Vest told The Associated Press that Woodman had been an employee at the Museum of Art for about two years before the alleged theft was discovered.

Woodman has a paper trail for some of the money," Vest said. "The rest of it is missing."

Harker said Woodman was hired in February, shortly after the theft was discovered.

Woodman said he and his family feel bad for him and his family, Harker said.

Woodman is a very unfortunate situation, but we have a stewardship over these funds," Harker said.

A trial is set for May 8, in the Provo District Circuit Court. Mary Baldwin, the county attorney assigned to the case, was unavailable for comment.

Woodman was asked about the charges and said he was going to trial, Woodman said to comment about his case, "wouldn't be appropriate."

STATE OF BYUSA ADDRESS: Matt Cowley, BYUSA president, and Kamie Hobbs, BYUSA vice president, spoke to students today in the Memorial Lounge concerning BYUSA accomplishments for the 1994-95 school year.

BYUSA leaders celebrate feats, address student concerns at forum

Cowley, Hobbs call 1994-95 a 'banner year'

By TRAVIS E. WOOD
and JAMES K. ERICSON
Universe Staff Writer

Matt Cowley, BYUSA president, and Kamie Hobbs, BYUSA vice president, addressed students Thursday morning in the ELWC Memorial Lounge regarding accomplishments of the 1994-95 BYUSA administration.

"This has been ... a banner year for BYUSA in a lot of different ways," Cowley said.

"We came into office discussing the idea of addressing real issues," he said.

There was an aim toward improving the sense of ownership students feel in their student association and in the University.

Establishing an ombudsman position, making more budgetary decisions and increasing multi-cultural student involvement at the officer level were among some of the accomplishments mentioned.

Cowley and Hobbs also gave reasons for not implementing a toll-free registration number that was discussed during their campaign.

To have all the registration phone lines be toll-free, "it would cost $42,550 a day," Hobbs said.

She said they thought about having fewer toll-free lines to diminish the cost, but this would be inefficient, she said.

Cowley and Hobbs acknowledged that fewer than 30 students were in attendance for their address.

"Actually, this is pretty good attendance because this isn't much different from when President Lee does will remain a problem.

"I think that's a problem that will be faced year after year after year," she said.

Hobbs also said the public relations branch of BYUSA was created this year to promote awareness among students.

She said the public relations branch informs students of the positive experiences students can have through BYUSA.

One student felt that more was needed with the public relations effort.

"The only thing I have to say about (the public relations effort) is that it needs to be increased about one-hundred fold," Andy Brinton, a junior from Eagle, Idaho, majoring in statistics, said.

"I think there could be a lot done to improve this whole environment at BYU if BYUSA would promote itself more."

Brinton also raised a question about what could be done to improve BYU health insurance to better meet the needs of students.

"The health insurance offered by BYU is a joke," he said.

Cowley said nothing could be done to instantly change the health-insurance plan, but surveying students for concerns and input is an option.

Hobbs also responded to the question.

"I'd recommend that you speak to Bobbi Jo Hill about that one," she said, referring to next year's BYUSA vice president.

this," Cowley said.

Hobbs attributed the turnout to student apathy.

"Apathy is a problem with most student associations at all universities," she said.

"We would love to see everybody in the world involved with BYUSA in some way."

Hobbs said as BYUSA becomes better known each year among students, the apathy will decrease but

"We would love to see everybody in the world involved with BYUSA in some way."

Gingrich top dog in political media coverage

WASHINGTON — One day this week, the president of Egypt paid a courtesy call on Capitol Hill. As House Speaker Newt Gingrich hurried outside to greet him, a 7 1/2-year-old tourist spotted the celebrity. "Hey, Newt," he called, waving an arm, jumping up and down. "Hey, Newt! Newt! Newt! Newt!"

Not everyone loves him, but can anyone imagine a kid shouting upon seeing Thomas Foley or Jim Wright or even Sam Rayburn?

Speakers of the House don't normally generate excitement. Nor would it ever have occurred to them to request television time for an address to the nation, as Gingrich is doing Friday night. Just like a president.

Few politicians outside of the White House have become so dominant so fast as Gingrich, or so capable of taking the agenda-setting role away from the president.

By the end of March, the big three TV networks devoted 114 stories to him and only 33 to the second most visible member of Congress, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole. The Associated Press carried 1,083 stories mentioning Gingrich from the time he became speaker to the start of this week.

Prairie dog relocation plans anger ranchers

CEDAR CITY — Ranchers Deia and David Burton are angry that the Bureau of Land Management wants to use land where they graze sheep and cattle as a new home for the Utah Prairie Dog.

The prairie dogs, which have been designated a threatened species, have to be relocated from the new Cedar City Post Office site.

The BLM has proposed moving them to a place where the Burtons graze sheep and cattle during part of the year.

"They (the prairie dogs) are spring foragers," Deia Burton said. "We are afraid there will be nothing left when we move our cattle to the area in the fall." Rebecca Bonebrake, wildlife biologist for the BLM, disagreed.

She said it would take about 100 prairie dogs to eat the amount of grass consumed by one cow in a month's time.

Federal anti-drug education funds wasted

WASHINGTON — In the last eight years, critics contend, taxpayer money designed to warn schoolchildren away from drugs and alcohol has been diverted to a slew of inappropriate and wasteful things.

Even many anti-drug activists and grassroots supporters agree.

A program begun with high hopes in the Nancy Reagan era, and recently praised by President Clinton as crucial for children, was riddled with waste from the start.

As they fight in Congress to save its $482 million budget, supporters point to recent studies indicating drug use among youth is on the rise.

Thousands of schools use the money wisely, bringing in police to talk with students and paying for counseling and intervention for children and teens, federal officials say.

"We need to make sure that the very precious money that we have is used for the correct purposes," said Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, R-Fla.

Utah politicians 'addicted to' tobacco money

SALT LAKE CITY — Four of five Utah members of Congress have accepted donations of $20,900 from tobacco-industry groups in the last decade — just 0.125 percent of the $16.7 million the industry has doled out to 422 federal politicians.

Orrin Hatch, Robert Bennett, Enid Waldholtz and Bill Orton were among recipients listed in the study by Common Cause. Twenty-one members of Congress, most of them from tobacco-growing states, each got upward of $40,000 since 1985.

"The tobacco lobby's use of political contributions is a classic example of the influence-money scandal at work in Washington," Common Cause president Ann McBride said. "Members of Congress are as addicted to large campaign contributions as smokers are to nicotine."

Tobacco-related groups also made donations to more than 50 members of the Utah Legislature totaling $88,000 in the 1990s, other records show.

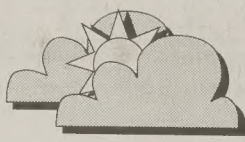

Congress and the Utah Legislature shy away from heavy-handed regulation of tobacco companies and other businesses out of a conservative respect for the free market, not because their votes are bought.

CIA director assesses media responsibility

By TRINA C. HAILES
Universe Staff Writer

Adm. Robert J. Inman, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, stressed the role media plays in government at the Communication Department's symposium Thursday.

Inman presented five important points that journalist students should know when they report on government.

First, he said journalists should know how to distinguish between fact and opinion. Second, journalists must understand the difference between aggressive reporting and character assassination. They should also be able to determine what is right versus what is wrong. Journalists must also understand that freedom of speech comes with the responsibility of accurate reporting and not relying on anonymous sources. Finally, journalists should focus on issues rather than personalities.

Inman also addressed the recent changes in government-reporting that have come from advances in technology. He said the introduction of channels like C-SPAN allows the public to see governance without filters.

Whereas most people in previous decades got their information from weekly news media, in the 1990s, people look to daily and even half-hourly news to be informed, he said.

Ethics must also be looked at, he said. Inman said media ethics should be subject to peer review. He said the media should not be licensed, and standards should not be set by the government. Instead, the media should have self-induced regulations.

"If the media are to play their effective role, the challenge is not ruling by government, but by self," Inman said. Inman has spent 31 years in public service and was deputy director of the CIA for 18 months.

He has also served as the director of Naval Intelligence and director of the National Security Agency. Inman is an adjunct professor at the Lindon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, and at the Graduate School of Business at the University of Texas, Austin.

"Take Back the Night," Friday at 8 p.m. at the Provo Armory.

The rally will feature speakers for the first hour, and then participants will march through the neighborhood. After the march, poetry will be read and local bands will perform, said program director Bryn Goates, a junior majoring in art history from Albany, Ore.

"It is a chance to hear some good music and to be very strong and powerful," said Gail Houston, an assistant professor of English and a faculty adviser for VOICE. "It is a strengthening experience for women to walk together," she said.

"Take Back the Night" is important to survivors and people who want to be sensitive to survivors, Goates said.

It is an annual event at many college campuses across the nation and in some communities, she said.

Houston has participated in "Take Back the Night" since it was started at BYU four years ago. She said it is an incredibly empowering experience for women.

"We want women to be able to walk freely in our culture," Houston said.

One of the purposes of an activity like this is to help the healing process of survivors of violence, Goates said.

"You have a whole bunch of people rallying together. It is cathartic because people are validating that violence does occur, and they are taking a stand against it," Goates said.

The clothesline project, a tribute to female victims of violent crimes, has been displayed this week in the Art Gallery across from the Varsity Theater.

Holding the "Take Back the Night" rally at the end of the week will help the participants of the clothesline project, Goates said.

Clothesline is an individual way of celebrating survival and making a stand, while the rally is a way of doing so through the community, Goates said.

Houston said the experience will be fun and a good activist cause.

"There will be lots of room for people to come and play, dance, sing and eat," Houston said.

There will be a chance during the night for survivors of abuse to put on green armbands, Houston said.

Police Beat

By APRIL SAUNDERS
Universe Staff Writer

ASSAULT

On April 4 at 3:30 p.m. at the Deseret Towers basketball court, an argument escalated into a fight. The 19-year-old suspect grabbed the victim and repeatedly smashed his head into the basketball pole. The victim was knocked unconscious, and when he awoke, the suspect began punching the victim in the face. The suspect then fled the scene and the University Police arrived. The suspect is 5 feet 10 inches tall and has curly, sandy-blond hair with long bangs. He may answer to the name Jacob. Anyone with information regarding this suspect can contact the University Police at 378-2222.

SHOPLIFTING

At 11:22 a.m. on April 3, a male student was caught stealing a package of doughnuts and a 10-ounce container of milk. The student was issued a university citation.

SEX OFFENSE

On April 2 at 3:30 a.m. in lot 40 of the Tanner Building, University Police officers apprehended a 21-year-old male student with a long-lens camera. The student had been taking pictures of women who were dressing with their blinds open in Hinckley Hall. The student was issued a $150 citation for lewdness and was referred to the Honor Code Office.

RECKLESS BEHAVIOR

A truck occupied by one 18-year-old student and three visitors was stopped just shortly after midnight on April 2. The suspects were throwing water balloons at people on the street. The suspects were released with warnings.

On March 30 at 3:44 p.m. at the Tanner Building Computer Center, a student posted a sex-line phone number on the wall. A student admitted to posting the number, and he was referred to the University standards.

FIRE

On March 31 at the Brimhall Building at 11 a.m., the University Police received a phone call from a witness who reported that the west part of first floor of the Brimhall Building was on fire. The sprinklers went off and put the fire out.

ILLEGAL ACTIVITY

On April 5 at 12:05 a.m., three visitors were caught by the University Police on the east side of the Kimball Tower rollerblading.

The suspects gave the University Police false identification. The juveniles were issued a warning and released to their parents.

On March 29 at 8:43 p.m., an 18-year-old student was caught skateboarding on campus. The student gave University Police false identification. The student was issued a $150 university citation.

Friends Helping Friends

Michael Easton and Debbie Grover

When we started looking at rings, we were looking for quality that would last a lifetime, at a price we could afford now. We wanted to find all of this at a place we could trust.

We found this at Alard & Losee Jewelers. They took the time to help us find what we wanted, and not what they wanted to sell us. They were not the first place we visited, and even after going there we visited other places, because we wanted to find what suited us best. However, after looking elsewhere, we returned to Alard & Losee because they had what the others couldn't offer us.

We were looking for genuine service and of course a good deal and they gave us both. We feel comfortable writing how we feel about them because we consider the people at Alard & Losee to be our friends. Friends help out friends, and they've done something for us which will last a lifetime.

BYU to host Dancesport Championship

By STEPHANIE HARRIS
Universe Staff Writer

BYU will play host for the first time to the United States National Junior Ballroom Dance Championships in conjunction with the annual BYU Dancesport Championships April 7 and 8 in the Marriott Center.

The United States Cabaret Champion will also be named at the event with a special performance each night by the Ukrainian Formation Team and David Rosinski and Michelle Evans, the World and U.S. Cabaret Champions.

The United States Cabaret "tends to be a highlight of the championships," said Claudia Hill, BYU ballroom dance faculty.

"Due to the popularity of this event last year, the location was changed to the Marriott Center so all spectators could get a good seat."

"This event proved to be very high-spirited last year and one you won't want to miss," said Lee Wakefield, BYU ballroom dance director.

The Standard ballroom dance competition will begin Friday at noon with the competition for the United States Pre-Teen Standard Formation Championships. This will be followed by the United States Junior Standard Formation Championship at 2:45 p.m.

After an hour break the competition will resume at 6 p.m. with the semifinal and final medals competitions, youth, novice and amateur finals and open general dancing.

According to Hill, the youth dancers may compete in International Standard Ballroom, International Latin and American styles. International Standard Ballroom competitors will dance the waltz, quick-step and tango.

International Latin competitors will compete with the samba, rumba and paso doble. American style competitors will dance the foxtrot, cha cha and the swing.

petitions will be held followed by special guest performances and an awards presentation.

Saturday the beginning rounds of the Latin competitions start at 9 a.m. and run until 3 p.m. at which time the finals for the pre-teen and junior Latin formation championships will be held.

At 6 p.m. the evening program will begin with general open dancing for the last 10 minutes of every hour.

Final competitions will begin at 7 p.m. and run till 11:30 p.m. at which time the special guests will perform followed by the Amateur Latin Finals.

Tickets will be $6 for one night and $10 for both nights for students, faculty and staff and $8 for one night and $14 for both nights for the general public. Reserved table seats will be $25 each night.

Tickets are available through the Marriott Center Ticket Office at 378-

BYU.

BYU has a 10-year contract with the National Junior Championships every year and has also secured a contract to hold the National Professional Standard Ballroom Championships beginning next year for the next years.

"The American Ballroom Company who holds the rights to all of the National Championship titles, decided to hold the Junior Championships in Provo due to the high level of interest in ballroom dancing from youth Western United States.

"Approximately 650 entries pre-teen to 18 year olds recently competed in November at Brigham Young University's annual Medals Ballroom Dance Championships.

"This is the largest number of competitors anywhere in the United States so Provo does seem to be the ideal choice for the United States Junior Championships," Wakefield.

Mama's Cafe to feature 2 nights of folk music

By BRYAN HURLEY
Universe Staff Writer

Mama's Cafe will present two nights of some of the best local folk musicians this weekend when Michael Waterman takes the stage tonight and Mama's hosts the "Folk Fest '95" on Saturday.

Singer and songwriter Waterman's performance will inevitably feature the catchy guitar melodies and honest lyrics that are featured on his debut album "Walking Alone."

Though the CD has sold almost a thousand copies in limited local release, Waterman still looks forward to his live performances.

"I love to play at Mama's because it is the only place in either Salt Lake or Provo where you can play your own stuff and people come and actually listen to the music," Waterman said. "It's a place where you don't have to end up playing 'Margaritaville' just to keep people happy."

On the CD and in live shows, Waterman's smooth voice nicely accents his acoustic guitar to create a sound which Waterman labels "urban folk."

"I think folk gets as bad a name as does any music when it is taken too seriously," Waterman said. "It tends to get too pretentious."

Waterman said he tries to steer away from the trite folk stereotype.

"I try to write about basic everyday concerns; it's usually pretty universal," Waterman said. "Some songs will make you laugh, some make you think, some are so heavy they make me uncomfortable, and others are about love and some are about hate."

"Most of the songs will let you walk away feeling pretty good."

Waterman will take the stage at 9 p.m. There is a $2 cover charge.

Five local artists will take place in the "Folk Fest '95," a showcase concert Saturday night that will benefit the local chapter of Amnesty International.

Sarah Williams will headline the show, with Jesse Thurgood, Johnny Rowan, The Haircuts and Aesop filling the bill.

Part of the proceeds from the $2 cover charge for the show will go directly toward starting a chapter of Amnesty International in Provo, said "FADE" magazine news writer Eric Beecroft.

"Many of the artists which are performing at the show deserve serious recognition from local audiences and national record labels alike."

Saturday's show begins at 8 p.m. For more information about either show call Mama's at 375-1525.

STUDENT LIFE PROGRAMMING

Known artist to visit Orem

SALERIE MERKLEY
Universe Staff Writer

Friberg, an internationally known artist, will be selling prints of his artwork while meeting the public this Saturday at R.C. Willey's in Orem.

Friberg, the man who did the Book of Mormon pictures, Friberg has been known in the art world for his paintings of the Canadian American Indians and portraits of the Royal Family.

The 62-year-old Utah resident began his career when he was seven years old, drawing cartoons. This led to a more lucrative career at age 14 when he began sign painting in Phoenix, Ariz. According to Friberg he has been making a "man's living in art" since he was 13 years old. To this day he claims to never have held a "salary" job.

"It's a very strenuous career," Friberg said. "But it's something that I leave to the world."

In a statement made about Arnold Friberg, Cecil B. DeMille said, "Among the living artists who have dedicated themselves to historical and religious art, one stands out for his virility and warmth, dramatic understanding, and truth. That man is Arnold Friberg."

Friberg takes a more modest approach toward his success. He refers to the "feeling" of each painting. "It's the truth that's in each subject that makes the painting," he said.

One of Friberg's recent favorites is his portrait of Queen Elizabeth II and her horse "Centennial" at Buckingham Palace. Friberg was commissioned to do the equestrian portrait in 1990.

Tim Hess, the store manager of R.C. Willey, spoke of Friberg's diligence to his work.

"He (Friberg) still paints every day," Hess said. "He researches the historical aspect of every subject thoroughly." According to Hess, Friberg has purchased original Mountie outfits and trapper furs so he can assure the accuracy of his paintings.

"There is so much that can be said about him," Burrows said of Friberg. "You could fill volumes."

Arnold Friberg will be in R.C. Willey Saturday from noon to 7 p.m.

AN HONEST MAN:

Many Latter-day Saints know Arnold Friberg's work from illustrations in The Book of Mormon. He also painted "Prayer at Valley Forge." Friberg will be at R.C. Willey's in Orem this Saturday.

Steel drum, percussion ensemble to perform

LISA BERRY
Universe Staff Writer

Panoramic Steel and Percussion will perform music ranging from reggae to jazz in their joint effort at 7:30 in the Madsen Recital Hall.

Panoramic Steel and Percussion Ensemble is a 15-member group that performs their music on various percussive instruments including marimbas, xylophones, boom-boms, timpani, congas, temple blocks, drums, and an electric bass.

The group plays a wide variety of music including jazz, classical and reggae, said member Mitch Lee. The group has the opportunity to perform in front of audiences that most students have never seen.

Panoramic Steel is a 16-member group that uses upended steel drums from 55-gallon oil barrels. The instruments originated in the Caribbean when slaves were denied their native instruments.

"People wanted a way to express themselves through music," said member Clark Newell, "so they used instruments out of what was available, including oil and drums."

According to Ron Brough, the director of the group, the Percussion Ensemble will perform several pieces including "The Storm," a jazz/fusion piece described by Brough.

"I use all kinds of instruments to play about everything but the steel drum," Brough said.

The ensemble will also play a series of novelty ragtime pieces where the traditional piano has been replaced by marimbas, and five new pieces by Philip Parker with clarinet soloist David Randall, associate dean of the College of Fine Arts and Communications.

"The combination of clarinet and percussion ensemble is quite rare, but it works," Brough said.

Panoramic Steel will then begin its segment of the program with a jazz/fusion work, "Oops," by Steps Ahead.

Their second piece, "Reggae for My Baby," will combine reggae music with an organ and a steel band.

Next will be "All For Now," a New Age ethnic piece using bata drums from Cuba.

Band member Clark Newell enjoys "All For Now" for its modern New Age feel.

"The piece has a lot of Latin and African tribal rhythms," Newell said. "It's really different than the other program pieces."

According to Director Ron Brough, the group will conclude with "Pan Ecstasy," a piece similar to pieces played in an annual panorama that is like the Superbowl of steel bands.

"Pan Ecstasy is a real high-energy piece," Brough said.

It combines everything from Chinese pentatonic scales to 1960s sit-com music to salsa.

Tickets for the performance are $4 for students, $5 for senior citizens and $6 for the general public.

UP DUST: BYU second baseman D.G. Nelson slides safely into home past the Air Force catcher during yesterday's game. BYU won the game, its sixth straight at home, and now looks to continue its home field dominance when Regis College visits Provo today and Saturday for a three-game series with the Cougars.

Cougars look to extend home streak

h Pullins satisfied pitching, works
ard improved hitting

By DAVID KING
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU baseball team (20-11) will take the field once again in its continuing quest for the WAC championship. The Cougars will be Regis, a Division II school from Denver. But Pullins has the task of facing the Regis pitching staff in Provo, where BYU is undefeated (6-0) for the year. The teams will play a single game Friday at 2 p.m., followed by a doubleheader on Saturday starting at 11 a.m. All games will be at Cougar Stadium.

"It is a good Division II school," Pullins said. "We have a lot of experience from last year and they do have some of the best pitchers in the WAC."

Pullins was referring to Regis' Rich Boyd, who sports a 90-plus mph fastball. Pullins was recently contacted by Team USA and asked to scout Boyd for the USA coaching staff.

"Pullins isn't at the point of the season where he worries too much about other clubs. He believes his team still has a lot of work to do. But 90 percent of winning is about your team execute at their own level," Pullins said. "The other 10 percent is to do with scouting the other teams."

Pullins remains quietly confident in his team and his chances to win the WAC championship. And after the 31 games on the road, he and his team are very confident playing in Provo.

Pullins said of the other teams who have reached the 20-win mark, at least half of their games were at home. Meanwhile the Cougars have reached that mark with only six home games.

"We're going to be tough to beat," Pullins said. "On our team the pitching has now become our strength. That is very rare for a BYU team, and will be the key to the championship."

Pullins praised his starting rotation of Matt Rex, Tom Gatten and Brian Hays. He also said Mike Nielsen is good enough to be a starter, but because of his bullpen experience, he will become BYU's key reliever. Eric Dowdell, who missed last season with a sore arm, has now finished his rehabilitation and is throwing very well. Eric Boyer is also coming out of the bullpen, which is a new experience for him, but Pullins is confident that Boyer is capable of doing the job.

The final piece of the bullpen puzzle may come in the form of Robbie Reid. Left-handed reliever Matt Rex will have shoulder surgery on Tuesday, ending his season. So Pullins is hoping that Reid can become the key left-handed reliever for the Cougars. Rex will be applying for a hardship redshirt season.

While the pitchers are going well, Pullins said the problems are different for every player, so he is using a lot of gimmicks in batting practice to get some improvement.

"So much of hitting is confidence," said Pullins. "And at the beginning of the year we faced some good pitchers. Two of them were All-Americans. It just shattered our confidence."

The main concern for the Cougars is the high number of strikeouts. But Pullins said a lot of that will improve as the batters become more selective in their pitches, making the little adjustments and improving their mechanics.

The hope for Pullins is a more consistent Cougar offense. Pullins said games are made up of seven or nine different segments, and like boxing, whoever wins the most rounds is usually going to win the fight.

"Let's win every inning," said Pullins. "I know that it's not possible, but it's a good goal. The team that can score in four or five innings will usually win the game."

Leading the team on the offensive side are Brad Winget and Jared Bills. Winget was named the WAC Player of the Week this past week for his 10-for-19 batting performance over six games. Bills comes into the weekend series riding a six-game hitting streak.

Pullins looked back favorably on the past two weeks at home, and said he could see the improvements the team had made. He also commented on how tight the team seemed during its first few games here. Pullins attributed a lot of it to the "put up or shut up" mentality.

"All year long when we lost close games, the team was saying 'We would have won it at home,'" said Pullins. "Well, here was our chance to prove it. The excuses wouldn't work anymore."

Going into the weekend series with Regis, Pullins wants to have a good series while getting ready for Utah next week. Pullins said that none of his pitchers will go the entire game, and that he will be substituting a lot.

"Utah will be down after getting beat by Air Force," said Pullins. "But when they play us, everything goes out the window."

formed well in the past.

Some of the men's distance runners will not be competing in their specialty events this weekend.

"Mark Johansen and Brandon Rhoads will not be competing in the steeplechase, so we may not score as high in those events. They will be running in the 1500 because they have been running the steeplechase at sea level the last couple of weeks. We like to alternate their events so they don't feel stuck in one event," Hirschi said.

The women's track team will be missing several athletes who are competing in the Texas Relays in Austin, including All-American heptathlete Tiffany Lott.

Amy Christiansen, a BYU record holder and All-American in the shot put, is suffering from a bad back, but will compete this weekend and plans to finish out the season.

"My back started to hurt in the fall, and the pain has just gotten worse. I've had X-rays done, but I don't know the results yet. Hopefully it's just a pulled muscle that will get better with time," Christiansen said.

After a bad performance in Fresno last weekend, Christiansen hopes to throw an NCAA qualifying mark in the shot put on Saturday.

The events today will include the men's hammer, the men's and women's long jump, and the men's and women's javelin. Trials will also be held for the men's and women's sprinting events and the 5000 meters. Competition begins today at 2:30 p.m. at the Track and Field Stadium.

The field events on Saturday will begin at 10 a.m. with the women's hammer. The running events will begin at noon with the men's and women's 4x100 relay.

McGown.

"I think it's a game we can win," he said. "It will be an exciting match that could go either way."

The Cougars are coming off a victorious road trip where they defeated Loyola Marymount and USC. The Cougars are fighting for a fourth place finish which would secure their play-off birth.

HUTU from page 1
Most of the mud huts stand vacant, many with their wooden doors open.
At the first sound of a vehicle, frightened villagers scatter into me banana groves.
When they see it is not a military vehicle, they slowly begin to emerge.
Because they say the army comes at night, many now sleep in the bush.
The victims in these villages were all Hutu, but at each stop, the Hutu villagers said the killings happened because Hutu extremists had killed a Tutsi family of six at a camp for the homeless in the village of Muhenge.
Then the refugees and the army retaliated, killing Hutus in much greater numbers.
Officials are trying to convince villagers to help them stop the extremists because when they kill Tutsis, more Hutus are killed in revenge.

Young overcomes challenges by faith

By ALLEN CHEATHAM
Universe Staff Writer

Arguably BYU's most valuable alumnus and the 1994 National Football League's Most Valuable Player addressed students and others at the Orem LDS Institute of Religion on Thursday.

Students and faculty from Utah Valley State College filled the LDS Institute Building 45 minutes early to hear from the former Cougar Quarterback, Steve Young.

Young didn't speak much about his career with the World Champion San Francisco 49ers, but he did leave his fans with an inspiring message.

"I want to say something today that will affect you," Young said.

Young then related his experiences growing up as a shy and scared boy who refused to go to the second grade without his mother. As a young man, he made up excuses of why he couldn't go on an overnight Boy Scouts camping trip because he was afraid to leave home.

"I could lie to you and say I was macho, but I wasn't," he said. "The most traumatic experience of my life was getting on the plane to come to BYU."

He said as a youth he was so shy he would sit in the back of the room so no one would notice him. While walking to a church activity, he'd wear a ski cap to make his hair straight because he thought people with curly hair were weird.

Young added that he often reflects on the past and is amazed that he has been able to accomplish all that he has.

"I was challenged to do something that for me was humanly impossible to do," he said.

Young said the reason he's been able to accomplish so much is because of his faith in the Lord.

"If for some reason the Lord left me, I'd quit," he said. "I'd just go up to Heber and grow hay. That's the level of anxiety I can handle."

Young said he realizes the Lord has a mission for him to accomplish and again emphasized that without the Lord's involvement, he'd quit.

"The Lord has a will for everyone," Young added. "I challenge you to find the will of our Heavenly Father for you."

Young said he is proud to be a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and of the Church's pioneer heritage.

He added a challenge to the audience to catch the pioneer spirit.

This includes restaurants, shopping malls, businesses, elevators, retail stores, libraries, theaters, fitness and sports facilities and a myriad of other locations as listed in the statute.

The purpose of the Clean Air Act is to protect individuals who don't smoke from the effects of ETS, Hadden said. "One of the things people need to take account of is that even though only 14 percent of Utahns smoke, everyone is exposed to ETS," he said. "We need to educate people about this so they can take steps to reduce or eliminate their exposure to ETS."

One of the things the state health department and other agencies around the state are doing to enforce the policy is educating children about the effects of ETS, said Pat Tucker, health educator and tobacco specialist at the Utah County Health Department.

Although Utah's anti-smoking laws are strict, they are certainly the strictest in the nation, Hadden said.

The state of Utah has been a leader in some areas, but there have been some major shifts in the past years for all states to become involved, Hadden said.

Most people throughout the world recognize the serious health problems caused both by direct smoking and ETS and are working to make the laws stricter everywhere, he said.

FCC aims to promote children's TV

By LARAY NELSON
Universe Staff Writer

The Federal Communications Commission introduced a plan Wednesday to ensure that the television broadcast industry is meeting the educational and informational needs of children.

The FCC proposals are amendments to the Children's Television Act of 1990 and are directed to more effectively facilitate licensee compliance.

The goal of the plan is "to strengthen the functioning of the children's marketplace over the long term," according to the commission.

Because the children's act was ambiguous, the new proposal includes specific requirements. For example, the programming must be directed toward children 16 years and younger. It also states that the educational objective of programs must be specified in writing. Finally, the educational program must be regularly scheduled for at least 30 minutes and aired between 6 a.m. and 11 p.m.

To avoid the disappointing results achieved in 1990, the commission proposed to enforce techniques by establishing monitoring procedures, "safe harbor" quantitative processing guidelines, or programming standards.

The proposed changes are based on three principles.

First, the judgments of the program's quality are best made by the audience.

The second principle is to create a definition of programming specificly designed to serve the educational and informational needs of children.

The third principle "utilizes marked forces as much as possible to guide broadcaster behavior," according to the commission.

Local broadcasters will probably not be affected by the new proposals.

"Our station has the most educational programming on a weekly basis in the market," said Steve Carlston, vice president and general manager of KSTU 13. "Fox is the leader in this market as far as educational programming.

"The stations in our market have a unique responsibility to air programs to educate the audience and it should not be enforced by the government," said Carlston.

"We are licensed to serve the community and most of the stations understand and integrate this into their programming."

Apex Marketing

FREE CAR!

Do not decide on a summer job until you have spoken with us at Apex. Last year in Pest Control sales, individuals earned $12,000 dollars on average in just four months and some people made up to $50,000. This opportunity has provided hundreds of students the chance to go to school each year without having to work a job at the same time.

As a sales representative for Apex Marketing you are paid a high percentage of every sale that you make for Terminix Pest Control (our sponsor company). In addition to the sample pay scale shown below, we also pay our representatives $1000 to $3000 in daily, weekly and monthly incentives, and a guaranteed draw during the summer.

If a sales representative sells 500 sales in 4 OR 6 months of work this summer, he or she will receive a free Honda Civic (in addition to the $50,000 they already earned). Come and see if you can earn the car! This offer goes for experienced sales people as well! Remember, there is a signing bonus for all current California pest control licensed representatives, so come on in and earn more with Apex!

Sales	Bonus	Representatives needed
50	$3,420	N. California 6
100	$7,600	S. California 2
150	$12,540	Washington DC 8
200	$17,480	Ohio 10
260	$23,712	Idaho 4
320	$30,400	Nevada 6
380	$36,100	Alabama 6

I personally have made over $36,000 each summer for the last two summers and do not think that there is a better money making opportunity available for summer work.
